PAST AND PRESENT

A university credit course including a three-week trip to East Asia.

HISTORY 161/N261/N491

East Asia: Past and Present

This intensive course has been designed to give students a basic introduction to East Asian history and culture and an opportunity to enhance their understanding with a three week intensive immersion in East Asian life. The course will be under the direction of two East Asian specialists, Professor Martin Singer, History Department, Sir George Williams Campus of Concordia University, and Professor Paul Ropp, History Department, McGill University.

During a three week orientation period formal lectures, films, guest speakers and assigned readings will provide the student with an outline of East Asian history and an introduction to salient aspects of East Asian culture. The central theme of the lectures will be the comparison of different historical and cultural traditions in East Asia and the manifestations of those traditions in contemporary life.

In early May the class will depart from Montreal for a three-week journey through Japan, Hong Kong, Thailand and Singapore. The main emphasis of the trip will be visits to important historical and cultural sights, but there will also be ample opportunity to observe the impact of modernization and to pursue one's own particular interests in each society. There will be frequent briefing sessions throughout and the instructors will be available to answer questions and guide students.

All students will be asked to keep a daily journal. The journal will provide an opportunity to reflect on their experiences and to integrate their first hand impressions with their prior knowledge of East Asian life — perhaps to deepen their awareness of cultural differences and similarities, perhaps to readjust their preconceptions. In addition students with prior background in the study of East Asia will select a substantial number of readings in consultation with the instructors. They will submit an essay on some particular aspect of East Asian life.

The course will be available to students of varying backgrounds, on both credit and non-credit basis. Students without background in East Asia should register for History N261 (Historical and Cultural Background of East Asia). Students with previous background in East Asian history and culture should register for History N491 (Special Studies in History). Students from other institutions should petition their home universities for transfer credit arrangements. Interested members of the general public may register for the course on a non-credit basis with the Sir George Williams Division of Continuing Education.

This personal immersion in Oriental life should help give students a much clearer picture of East Asian history and culture than a university course can normally provide.

Timetable

Classes will be held Tuesday and Thursday evenings, 7-9 p.m., and Saturday mornings, 9:30 a.m. - 1:00 p.m. Classes commence Saturday, April 26th and end Thursday, May 13th. The balance of the course follows in the itinerary, the departure date for which is May 17, 1975.
